A WEEK THAT MEANS BUSINESS

by Paula Nicol
Deputy Chief Executive
Inverness Chamber of Commerce

Later this month marks the return of a full Highland Business Week for the first time in three years. I and the rest of the Chamber team are looking forward to this opportunity to come together and recognise the strength, resilience and diversity of the Highland business community; and, judging by the response we've seen, many of you are too.

Running a business in the current climate brings many pressures. It always has done, of course, but, having survived Covid, it can feel particularly challenging at present with rising prices, soaring energy costs and recruitment difficulties. As a private business in our own right, we understand this. Nevertheless, as anyone in business will tell you, where there are challenges, there are also opportunities and where there are setbacks, there are rewards. Highland Business Week is a place where many positive developments are initiated and cemented. So it matters.

Time is an increasingly precious commodity these days and many of us have altered our priorities as a result of recent events. It can be difficult to make room for external business activities when we're busy with the day to day. Yet, we all recognise the old adage about working in our business rather than on our business. With a deliberately concentrated programme of events, Highland Business Week represents a perfect opportunity to step away from the desk, shop or factory floor for a short while and return with a different perspective. Being away from our usual environment can be a great way of helping us to think differently, sparking our creativity and leading to new ideas.

The Highland Spotlight exhibition, one of the anchor events of Highland Business Week, is unique in bringing a wide range of businesses together under one roof. Not only does it represent an opportunity to actually do business – whether at the event itself or in the months that follow – by meeting many new buyers and suppliers, it is a place where collaborations and partnerships are formed, where new connections are made and where existing business relationships are strengthened. It is a fantastic showcase of the many varied businesses we have in the region. I say this often because I firmly believe it is true – whatever goods or services you may need to support the operation of your business, you will find them in the Highlands.

Highland Business Week is also a time when we recognise business success. We may not generally be very good in this country at blowing our own trumpets, but taking the time to enter awards such as the Highland Business Awards is a valuable exercise in itself, giving us an opportunity to step back and reflect on our achievements with our teams. Of course, there is the added bonus that we may end up being shortlisted or even winning, bringing additional profile and recognition for our business. I'm always so impressed by the achievements of the many businesses and individuals who are represented at the Highland Business Awards. This is an event that enables us to come together, learn from one another, celebrate success and inspire us all to achieve. You can read about this year's finalists on pages 32 and 33.

Elsewhere in the week, we have further networking opportunities as well as seminars and workshops from Inverness Chamber of Commerce members on a variety of topical business subjects, demonstrating the expertise that exists in our region and giving us the opportunity to learn and expand our knowledge. Some events are in person while others are virtual so, however you like to get together and whatever time you have, there is something in the programme for everyone.

Inverness Chamber of Commerce exists to connect, support and represent our members and the wider Highland business community. We look forward to engaging with many of you during Highland Business Week as we continue to do just that.

in | Tell us more about Wasps?

Wasps, which stands for Workshop and Artist Spaces Provision Scotland, is a charity and social enterprise dedicated to providing affordable artist studios and creative spaces. Wasps was founded in the late 1970s and has been serving the creative communities of Scotland ever since. We are the largest organisation of its kind in the UK, providing working accommodation for over 1000 artists and creatives at twenty properties across Scotland.

in | What services does Wasps offer?

Wasps restore buildings of historical interest and convert them to properties that can serve Wasps' core purpose. We offer working spaces for visual and applied artists, and also office spaces for organisations in the creative industries, social enterprise and charity sectors.

in | What makes you most proud/passionate about Wasps?

A very visible example of what Wasps does best can be seen in the Crown area of Inverness, where we have recently completed the second and final phase of works to restore and preserve the former Inverness Royal Academy buildings, just up the hill from the city centre. This £6m project has returned the complex to operational use as a creative hub but has also opened the buildings up to the public for the first time, offering gallery and event spaces, meeting rooms and flexible working areas, and a stunningly restored former Assembly Hall which is where the new café, operated by Café de Paulo, is situated.

Wasps was able to achieve this by fostering strong partnerships with local businesses and individuals keen to see these important buildings returned to use while sensitively acknowledging the buildings' history and importance for the city and region.

in | Can you tell us a little about your business focus for 2022?

Wasps plans to grow our creative community in Inverness during 2022 by working with local businesses to consider flexible desk space and hot desking, as a move from the bedroom into a supported business facility surrounded by like-minded people. Growing our creative community and showcasing the wealth of talent available in the building for the benefit of the wider business community in the Highlands to engage with, will be mutually beneficial. Wasps' offer of flexible, affordable space for business growth will be key to business incubation and retaining talent in the city. Elsewhere in Scotland we are growing our creative industry offer in Glasgow and Edinburgh with live developments at the former fish market, The Briggait in Glasgow, and through the development of the former Granton Railway Station in Edinburgh.

in | What would you say has been most valuable to you as members of Inverness Chamber?

Inverness Chamber of Commerce has been hugely supportive to Wasps in making the local business community aware of our activities and facilities at Inverness Creative Academy. By accessing its network, Wasps is able to communicate its intentions and also its thanks, to those who may benefit from our services in the city and to those who have supported our redevelopment process.

THE TAXING QUESTION OF CARBON CREDITS

Carbon offsetting is a positive measure to safeguard the environment but taking up grassland and good stock hill farmland for woodland creation to offset carbon could impact our ability to be self-sustaining in food production.

This position is supported by Scottish Land & Estates in their Route #2050 Report which calls for government policies that recognise the potential of an integrated land management approach on sustainable food, sequestering carbon and improving biodiversity.

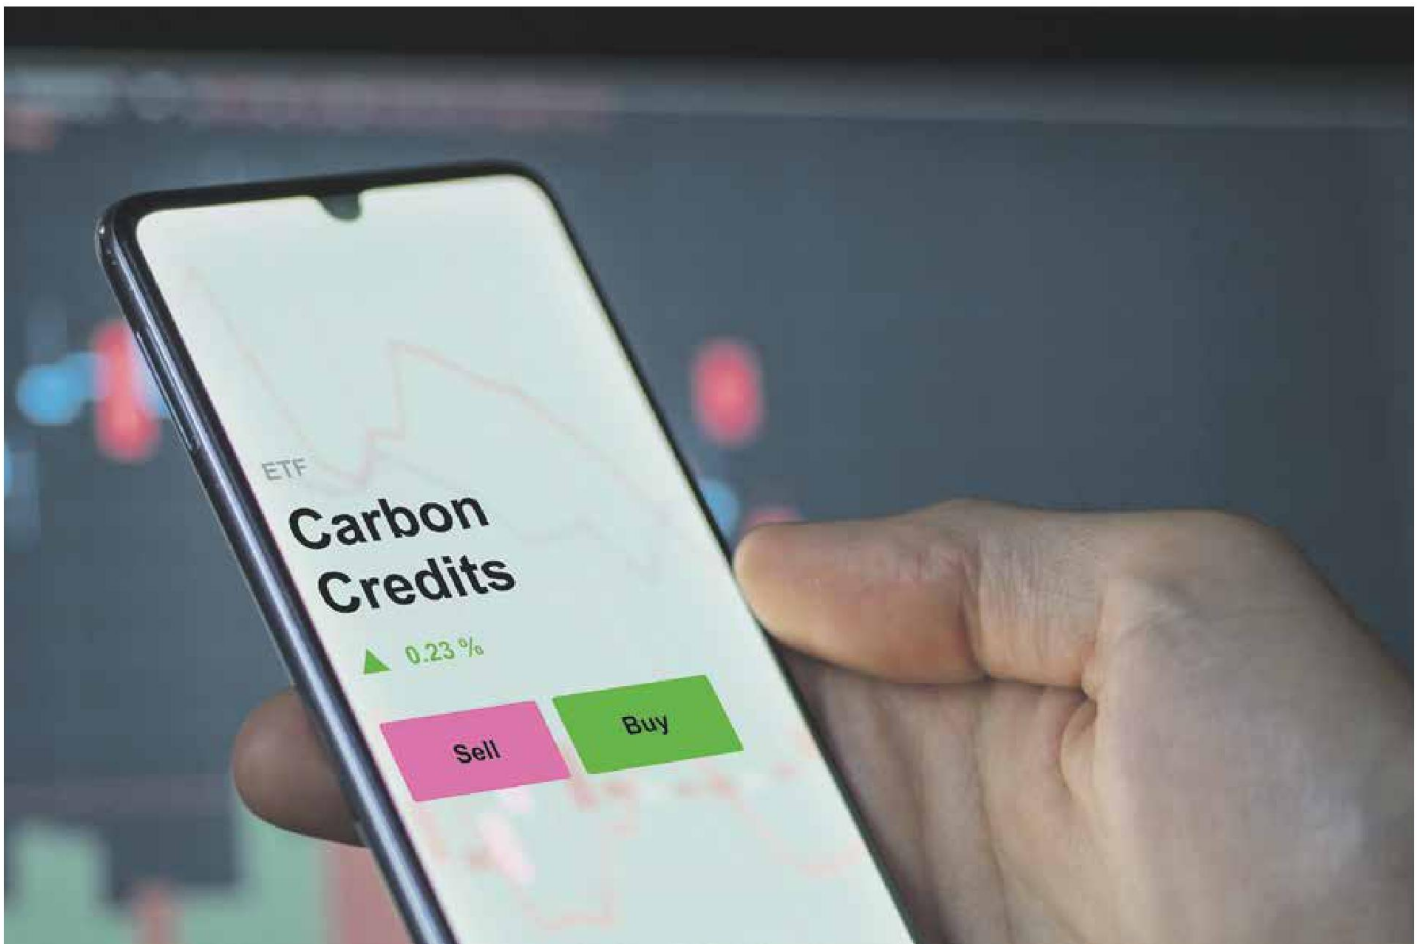

Once the decision is made to create woodland and the landowner has gone through the complex process of registering, assessing and validating the project, Pending Issuance Units (PIUs) are issued and, after verification, commuted to Woodland Carbon Units (WCUs), representing the amount of carbon sequestered.

But with carbon credits now being traded, the question of taxation looms, and without specific guidance from HMRC, we can only apply general tax principles.

There are potential income tax, corporation tax, capital gains tax and VAT liabilities that should be considered. Take advice early to ensure you know about potential liabilities and reliefs available.

Teclan

July saw the return of teclan's Million Steps for Mikeysline challenge. Now in its third year, the challenge is a regular occurrence in the annual fundraising calendar. 'Million Steps' was born in lockdown when we were only permitted to have one walk per day. The teclan team decided to use this time to boost their physical and mental health whilst supporting a local charity in much need of funds, by walking one million steps during the month of July. For every 10,000 steps walked, each team member would donate £1 to Mikeysline. They then decided to invite and encourage other businesses and groups to join them. That was in 2020.

Fast forward three years and, collectively, all the businesses who have taken part have now walked more than 92 million steps and raised more than £15,000 for Mikeysline. Put into context, we have already walked right around the world and are well on our way to doing it again.

A huge thanks goes out to all the teams who participated in this year's event; Inverness Chamber of Commerce, Dicksons of Inverness, CRU Holdings, Brook Street, Anderson Clark Motor Repairs, BBM Solicitors, The Long Partnership, BNI Tuath, Rainbow International, Norscot Joinery, Mikeysline and, of course, teclan Ltd.

Katie Melville, Fundraising Manager at Mikeysline, said: "We are delighted that this year's Million Steps for Mikeysline Challenge by teclan has raised over £5,000. This money will go towards expanding our services in schools and rural communities and training new volunteers for our textline, to be there for anyone who is struggling with their mental health or thoughts of suicide. teclan have been such wonderful supporters of Mikeysline for years, and it's fantastic that they have been able to encourage other businesses and members of the public to join them in this challenge."

Many of this year's businesses have already signed up for next year's challenge and if you'd like to join them, contact Neil at teclan Ltd for full details.

Port of Inverness

The Port of Inverness is looking to recruit at least three Trustees from 1st February, 2023. Over recent years, the Port's profile has grown considerably, and it now handles a wide range of cargos as well as being one of the main focal points for the renewable energy industry in the Highlands.

George Macleod, Chair of Inverness Harbour Trust, said: "The Port's strategic vision is bold and exciting, and to deliver it, we will require a diverse range of people who can add value with their expertise and experience."

Ideally one of the appointees should have a maritime background with an understanding of ports and the shipping industry being advantageous. Other skills being sought include a working knowledge of health & safety and its implications for the workplace as well as strategic management, stakeholder engagement and a knowledge of infrastructure development, including project management.

Appointments are part-time, up to two days per month, and there is a minimum of six board meetings per annum. An induction training programme is available to the appointed individuals.

For more information, please read the board member application information available at www.portofinverness.co.uk

MYXD

Inverness-headquartered MYXD has entered into an agreement with the Radisson Hotel

Group to provide pre-mixed cocktails to a handpicked selection of its UK hotels. MYXD, which has delivered almost 100,000 cocktails through its home delivery service at www.myxd.co.uk over the last two years, will be providing its entire core range of cocktails to Radisson hotels, including the Maple Old Fashioned, Salted Caramel White Russian, and Rhubarb & Ginger Gin Fizz.

Founded in 2020 by award-winning mixologist Grant Murray, MYXD is part of the Cru Holdings stable, which also operates seven bars and restaurants in the Scottish Highlands. Grant commented: "We're absolutely thrilled to be partnering with Radisson Hotel Group to supply cocktails to their UK hotels.

"Utilising pre-mixed cocktails helps save operating costs, as bars don't have to be stocked with the same variety of obscure spirits and mixers that are only used occasionally. However, guests still get to experience the theatre of cocktails being shaken with ice and poured in front of their eyes.

"This is our first major partnership spanning the UK and we're excited at the opportunities that this, and future event and venue partnerships, may bring."

SGL Carbon

SGL Carbon, is seeing a significant resurgence in order demand for its products. SGL Carbon operates on a global stage with 31 production sites worldwide. Muir Of Ord produces a range of fibre based products with carbon fibre at its core. The sustainable increase in sales has been dominated by the renewable energy sector with the material produced at the site being used in wind turbines, battery storage devices and electric vehicles.

The site continues to expand with another production line about to restart later in the year. In anticipation of this, the team are looking to expand and are actively recruiting for a variety of positions. Visit <https://jobs.sgcarbon.com/> for details.

Steve Easton, Managing Director at SGL Carbon, said: "Fibre production at the site was established in 1981, with SGL Carbon acquiring it in 1997. Since then, we have seen continued growth and expansion. While there had been a downturn in demand in recent years, since the start of 2021 this demand has significantly increased and the outlook for the future is extremely encouraging. It is an added bonus that the majority of our products are being used within the renewables sector, contributing to a greener future. We are very fortunate to be in this position and pleased we are able to give back to the local economy as we look to employ the best talent out there."

CFN Solutions

Telecommunication specialist, CFN Solutions, is reporting a record turnover following key contract wins which the organisation attributes to a growth in strategic partnerships throughout 2022.

New agreements with partners such as IT service providers and utility brokers have allowed the organisation, which counts office telephone systems, Wi-Fi solutions and mobile phones among its product range, to build further upon its client base.

Company Director Ian MacIntosh said: "Recent contract wins valued at over £100,000 have been a big boost to business and we've now got Scottish customers stretching from Wick to Glasgow and have even secured a number of new clients south of the border. This increase in business is a combination of the new agreements we've put in place and some great work by our sales team who are really driving growth."

In recent months, CFN has focused on improving its business processes and streamlining service delivery to enhance customer satisfaction in its products and services. An analysis of marketing activities and business pricing has also helped the company to succeed in a very competitive marketplace.

In response to the recent contract wins, CFN plans a recruitment drive which will see its current team of four increase to six with roles being created in both Inverness and Banchory.

Stephanie Smith

Port of Inverness

The Port of Inverness is delighted to announce the appointment of Capt. Stephanie Smith as Deputy Harbour Master. Stephanie took up the position at the beginning of August, and commenting on her appointment, Sinclair Browne Port Chief Executive said: "We are pleased to welcome Stephanie to the Port team. We undertook a comprehensive recruitment campaign to which we received an excellent response. Stephanie brings a wealth of experience, and I am sure that she will play an important role in the Port's continued development."

Laura McLean

Bill Stark

Harper MacLeod

Harper MacLeod are delighted to announce the appointment of Bill Stark, who joins the firm as a Debt & Asset Recovery Consultant. Bill is one of Scotland's leading practitioners in the field and combines a deep understanding of the law with commercial awareness and delivery. His application of technology and use of innovative management information tools means he can provide clients with real-time reporting of debt recovery processes.

Harper MacLeod has further strengthened its Inverness and Moray teams with a new partner, Laura McLean, as well as two new Law Society of Scotland accreditations, underlining its commitment to investing in talent and delivering client-driven support in the north of Scotland. Based in the firm's Elgin and Inverness offices, Laura helps clients on family issues including adoption, divorce and financial settlements. Laura, along with Ewan Stafford, a senior associate in the employment law team, have both recently received a Law Society of Scotland accreditation.

Carla Murdoch

Murray Travel

Carla Murdoch, the first member of the Murray Travel team to be employed by founders Scott and Sarah Murray six years ago, has been promoted to branch manager in the luxury travel agent's Inverness boutique. Carla, who leads an award-winning team of travel consultants, commented: "I'm extremely proud to be taking this next step in my career with Murray Travel, where I'll continue to provide unforgettable travel experiences for our customers. Murray Travel has become a vibrant collection of luxury travel boutiques across the Highlands and Moray, and I can't wait to see what comes next on this journey."

Sandra Piorkowska

Glen Mhor

The Glen Mhor Hotel would like to congratulate Sandra Piorkowska, who has recently been promoted to the position of Head Chef at their Waterside restaurant.

General Manager, Emmanuel Moine, said: "Sandra started as a commis chef at the Glen Mhor Hotel's Nicky Tams restaurant and has always had an interest and passion for good food. But more than anything she has shown resilience, commitment and dedication. Sandra quickly became someone we could count on in the kitchen and the promotion is more than well-deserved after all these years of hard work."

Albyn Housing Society

Albyn Housing Society are delighted to announce that Interim Director of Customer Services, Maureen Knight, has successfully secured the permanent position, following the appointment of Kirsty Morrison as Group Chief Executive earlier this year.

Group Chief Executive, Kirsty Morrison, said: "Maureen has displayed commitment to Albyn and our customers, commanding a wealth of knowledge, experience, and true passion for our sector."

"As an integral part of the Leadership Team in her interim role, Maureen has driven significant achievements in her department that will improve the service offering to our customers and develop Albyn's reputation locally and nationally."

Johnston Carmichael

Johnston Carmichael has appointed a new Chair and Vice Chair as the business looks to the future and drives forward its growth ambitions. On 1 June Mark Houston, partner and Head of Johnston Carmichael's Glasgow office, stepped up from his previous role as Vice Chair to Chair and Lynne Walker, partner and Head of Business Advisory, took up the role of Vice-Chair.

Lynne, who is based out of the firm's Elgin and Inverness offices, commented: "The business has been fantastically supportive of my career since I joined 17 years ago, and I am committed to supporting the next generation of leaders of the firm. I am hugely looking forward to working with Mark and the Board to continue growing the positive, empowering culture we enjoy in our firm."

In addition, the Inverness office are thrilled to have Peter Innes back in their team. Peter originally joined Johnston Carmichael in 2004 after completing his CA training in Inverness and has returned as a Business Advisory Partner after 18 years working in the firm's Elgin and Stirling offices. Peter specialises in supporting Rural businesses and has been enjoying getting out and about at the agricultural shows this summer.
